PREFACE

Much can be offered in support of the positive morale value of recognition for a job well done. Traditionally the military has utilized ribbons and medals as awards to recognize the singular accomplishment of both units and individuals. Obviously the greatest value occurs when awards are presented at a time contemporary to the act. Conversely, value is lost with the passage of time. This was the case in the delayed awarding of Air Medals to 824 valiant Civil Air Patrol Members. It was not until 1948, some five years after the fact, that these awards were made. This study is not offered to editorialize on the delay. Rather, it is offered as a means of providing additional recognition for the recipients.

Additionally this study will serve as a compilation and analysis of all awards made to Civil Air Patrol Members. Numerous steps have been taken to insure its completeness. There always exists the possibility that someone has been overlooked. If so, profound apologies are offered by the author.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Certainly high on the list of people providing help is Mr. Harry Fletcher of the U. S. Air Force's Albert F. Simpson Historical Research Center. It was Harry who guided the author through the maze of orders and regulations to the point of identification and copies of specific orders. The same type of accolade is in order for Messrs. Jackson and Taylor of the Modern Military Headquarters Branch, Military Archives Division of the National Archives and Records Service. Without their assistance the elusive General Order and associated material relating to the Sharp-Edwards Award would not have been located.

Thanks are also certainly due to fellow members of the Civil Air Patrol's National Historical Committee for their continued support.

Primary credit for the less than glamourous portion of this work justifiably goes to fellow CAPer G. Jude Miller. A product of the technically highly proficient current generation, Miller has enabled the author to present several analysis which are germane to a study of the individuals involved. Utilizing his personal computer, Miller has converted the structured General Order Listing to forms more useable by the historian.

Appreciation is also due to Mr. Robert M. Smith, Jr. of

New Orleans for the donation of his father's Air Medal to CAP Museum program. This medal was used as the basis of the frontispiece so ably done by Ms. Nancy Nevil also of New Orleans.

Last but not least are the very patient Ms. Patti Kaes and Ms. Margaret Molaison who have suffered through the author's semi-literate scribble to produce a readable and, I hope, interesting story.

THE MEDAL

Long a tradition in European armies, the recognition of individuals for special acts had its beginning in the United States Military with the Badge for Military Merit.¹ Orders creating the Badge for Military Merit were issued by the Continental Army on August 7, 1782. A simple heart shaped piece of cloth, it was awarded to all ranks involved in acts of unusual gallantry. George Washington wrote when he established this first award, "The road to glory in a patriot army and free country is open to all".

By definition that dedicated band of volunteer civilian aviators who made up the ranks of the Civil Air Patrol certainly met General Washington's definition of a patriot army. How then do you recognize their accomplishments? Obviously, the simplest solution is the utilization of an existing award. This was the course of action ultimately taken to recognize selected individuals whose performance of duties in defense of their country made them exceptional candidates for the award of the Air Medal.

The Air Medal was established for use by all branches of the United States Military establishment on May 11, 1942. The basis for its establishment was Executive Order Number 9158 of 11 May 1942 (Section III, Bulletin 25, War Department, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A of 11 September 1942 (Section III, Bulletin 49, War Department, 1942), and further amended by the National Security Act of 1947.² The medal is awarded to any member of the Armed Forces of the United States for qualifying service subsequent to September 8, 1939. This combat or non-combat award is awarded to individuals who have distinguished themselves by meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight. It was conferred in recognition of either single acts of merit or for sustained operations against armed enemies of the United States.

The medal itself, which was designed by Walker K. Hancock, is in the form of a 16-point sculptured compass rose of bronze. The obverse depicts an American eagle volant in attitude of attack gripping flashes of lightning in its talons. The eagle is centered in the compass rose. The suspension ring is attached to the medal utilizing a fleur-de-lis. Passing through the suspension ring is a ribbon of medium blue with narrow golden-orange stripes on each side. The reverse, which was a raised disc, was left blank for engraving of the recipient's name. As illustrated by the frontispiece, awards presented to Civil Air Patrol Members were uniquely engraved in that they bore the typical inscription, "Robert M. Smith, 1st Lieut., Civil Air Patrol, Active Duty, 1942-1943".

FOR VALOR

Although the order¹ awarding the first Air Medals read for "Meritorious Service" the content of that order would certainly indicate a significant amount of valor involved in the first two Air Medals awarded to Civil Air Patrol personnel. The citation for the award to Edmond I. Edwards, Civil Air Patrol read the same as the one for Captain Hugh R. Sharp, Jr. which is quoted below:

"Hugh R. Sharp, Jr., captain, Civil Air Patrol, serving with Army Air Forces. For meritorious achievement while participating in an aerial flight. When called upon by radio to rescue personnel of a crashed airplane an extremely hazardous landing was made at sea in swells 8 to 10 feet high. Although the left pontoon was damaged in landing, the airplane was kept from capsizing by expert airmanship and the rescue accomplished. As the sea was too rough for take off it was necessary to taxi the airplane until it could be towed the rest of the way to port. This difficult mission of great responsibility required outstanding initiative, resourcefulness, and a high degree of courage. The superior manner in which all duties were performed will establish high traditions of service for the Civil Air Patrol".

The valor involved in Captain Sharp's and Lieutenant Edwards' daring rescue of fellow pilot Lieutenant Henry T. Cross is best illustrated by Lieutenant Cross' explanation of what happened:²

"On July 21, 1942 at approximately 16:50 while on regular Patrol Mission at position latitude 3806 - longitude 7455 in a Warner Fairchild NC19144 with Lt. Charles Shelfus as observer we crashed at sea. On regaining consciousness in the water I found the ship had sunk and I could not find Lt. Shelfus".³ What is not told by Cross, is that he had suffered several fractured vertebrae and that his rescue would in itself result in a heroic effort by others. Within 55 minutes Rehoboth, Delaware Base 2's Sikorsky Amphibian arrived on the scene. Crewed by Base Commander, Major Hugh R. Sharp, Jr. and Lieutenant Edmond Edwards this venerable old aircraft encountered difficulty in its landing in the 8 to 10 foot swells. Due to a rough landing, the Sikorsky's left pontoon was damaged and begin to fill with water. What followed is best described by Major Sharp.

"After landing was unable to locate survivor for several minutes on account of rough sea. Finally sighted Pilot Cross at several hundred yards distance while he and Amphibian were on crests of waves. Encountered some difficulty in making the downwind turns to reach the victim, but this was finally accomplished, and a first attempt was made to taxi the ship up to victim. On this first attempt, however, we misjudged the strength of the wind and were blown away from the victim before we were able to grasp him. On second try, however, we were successful in grabbing ahold of the victim who was unable to hold on to the rope which was thrown to him because of his injury. The observer, Lt. Edwards, however, lifted Pilot Cross from the water and helped him into the ship, which was no easy task because of the rough water and the violent pitching of the Amphibian".⁴

"Remained in water at location searching for Observer Shelfus until 18:20. There being no signs of Shelfus and with Cross in serious condition, it was deemed wise to get to shore as soon as possible. As the sea was too rough for takeoff, we started taxiing on westerly course at 18:20. At approximately 18:25 port wing float sank. Observer Edwards went out to starboard bomb rack for balance, where he stayed uncomplainingly until the ship was beached at Chincoteague at about 01:30 the following morning. This was no easy task for Observer Edwards for he had stripped off almost all of his clothing in order to give them to Pilot Cross. At intervals all during the night, he was completely immersed in the sea during which waves flowed over the starboard wing float to which the bomb rack was attached, and to say the least, he was far from comfortable from cold after the sun went down".⁵

"Laid course for coastal buoy No. 3 planning to tie up to it for the night, not having sufficient gas to taxi to Chincoteague, the nearest harbor. By tieing to the buoy, our position could be reported by radio so that fast Coast Guard boat could rush Cross to shore for medical aid".⁶

"On approaching No. 3 buoy, we were met by Coast Guard picket boat".⁷

"Condition of sea made transfer of Cross unwise".⁸

"Seaplane was taken in tow by picket boat at 19:50 and towed to Chincoteague, arriving about 23:45".⁹

Sharp and Edwards were later awarded CAP's Blue Merit Emblem prior to their award of the Air Medal from the hands of President Roosevelt at a White House ceremony in February of 1943. Roosevelt's comments to Sharp that this was the first time that he had awarded this medal was fitting tribute in itself.¹⁰

As a postscript, Captain Sharp remained as the Commanding Officer of Base 2 until its closure on August 31, 1943. Lieutenant Edwards was later commissioned in the United States Navy where he continued to serve with distinction. Although unable to fly due to his injuries, Lieutenant Cross later transferred to Civil Air Patrol's Coastal Patrol Base Number 14 at Panama City, Florida where he served as its operations officer.

FOR SUSTAINED OPERATIONS

"NUFF SAID - Two tired, dirty CAP coastal patrol fliers landed, out of gas, at Ellington Field, Texas, after a six-hour ramble over the Gulf. Between them, the two had around 1500 hours over the water.

Across the field they noticed an impressive ceremony was in progress. What's doing? one of them asked.

They're awarding the air medal to some of the fliers, the mech explained.

What for? came the query.

The men have completed 100 hours of flight over the Gulf on patrol in their B-25s.

Oh, came the somewhat muffled reply from the visitors. And the two climbed back into their 90 horsepower, single engined Stinson Voyager for another long and weary round of escort duty".¹

To understand the psychology behind the above incident it is necessary to examine the background and accomplishments of Civil Air Patrol's wartime Coast Patrol Operations. Prior to

World War II a Joint Army-Navy Committee on Antisubmarine Warfare was established in order to fix responsibility for submarine defense in the Coastal Waters of the United States. The Army felt that in view of their Coastal Defense responsibility via its Coast Artillery Mission they had the responsibility, and as a consequence desired to equip themselves with suitable aircraft. On the other hand since earlier agreements and directives provided for over-water flight operations to be conducted by the Navy. Although the Navy's position prevailed, neither branch of service was in a position to do much immediately upon entry into the war. Shipping losses from the "Arsenal of Democracy" soared primarily as the result of marginally challenged German submarine activity in the Coastal Waters of the United States. In the first 6 months of 1942 180 allied ships were lost, many of which were in sight of land.

After several unofficial flights by dedicated pilots of the budding Civil Air Patrol an appeal was made by them to be utilized in this vital role. On February 17, 1942 the Chief of the Army Air Forces was authorized to accept the services of the Civil Air Patrol on a "trial basis".² Subsequent instructions of 9 March 1942 provided for the establishment of the Civil Air Patrol's first two Coastal Patrol Bases at Atlantic City, New Jersey and Rehoboth, Delaware.³ Prior even to these basic instructions, the airmen from Rehoboth made their first patrol on March 5, 1942 with aircrews from Atlantic City following shortly on March 10, 1942. Restricted initially to these two bases and a 15 mile offshore limit, the value of the initially intended 30 day trial period became obvious. Within the next 6 months, by September of 1942, 21 such bases had been established along the East Coast and the Coast of the Gulf of Mexico and their range greatly extended. By September shipping losses dropped off to 1 in that month and a total of only 7 for the balance of the war. As a total, these bases flew 86,685 missions for a total of 244,600 hours.⁴ To put this in proper perspective during a typical month, October 1942, military aircraft flew a total of 11,385 hours on this type of activity while the volunteers of Civil Air Patrol flew 23,612 hours.⁵

A profile of the pilots and others involved in this monumental undertaking is an insurmountable task. It suffices to say that they ranged in age from the young pilots who lied about their ages to the 70 year old seasoned veterans of World War I. The vast majority of them were far beyond the normal military service age. From an economic point of view, they ranged from the Texas millionaires to the bakery truck driver from Denver who hitchhiked his way to his first active duty base. Motivation, purely and simply patriotism of the highest order. It certainly wasn't for the recognition afforded by the award of a medal by a grateful government. This didn't occur until 1948.

Minutes of the Civil Air Patrol's Board Meeting of 16-17 February 1948 announces pending approval for the award. The minutes give testimony to the considerable effort put forth by Civil Air Patrol National Headquarters and CAP Veterans Incorporated. Using as a criteria 200 hours of over water flight as compared to the 100 hour requirement by the Army, 824 Civil Air Patrol Veteran Pilots were finally recognized by a series of General Orders beginning on 14 April 1948.⁶ Of this number 822 were given the initial award of the Air Medal and Sharp and Edwards were awarded Oak Leaf Clusters by virtue of their previous award.

Additionally, the General Orders list Flight Officer William J. Bailey, First Lieutenants W. V. Paul, Clifford C. Mercer, Everett C. Long and Gordon Pyle as posthumous awards. Their death was not as the result of Coastal Patrol activities. In the case of First Lieutenant, later Captain, Gordon M. Pyle died as the result of an aircraft crash on October 18, 1943 at Flushing, New York, while engaged in Civil Air Patrol's Tow Target and Tracking Service. The cause of death for the other four was not related to Civil Air Patrol's wartime active duty missions.

Although not awarded the Air Medal, the following additional Civil Air Patrol Coastal Patrol personnel paid the supreme sacrifice in defense of their country.

CHAPTER 6

HOME STATE OF RECIPIENTS

Based on a computer generated listing of all known recipients, a study was made of their home state. It is based on the individual's serial number which was assigned sequentially by the Wing (state) where the member first joined Civil Air Patrol. For the purposes of this study it is assumed that members joined CAP in their home state and, therefore, the serial number prefix number is used as a means of identifying home states. For statistical purposes Sharp and Edwards are included as having received only one award.

Tabled below are the Wing Prefix Numbers used to determine the state of initial CAP membership and the number awarded:
